

PPA PROFILE: James Cook

SELF IMAGE

D I S C

James is a decisive and forceful self-starter. Being of a competitive nature, he prefers a situation where he has freedom to act. He will always look for a quick result which may enhance his opportunity for advancement. James may at times take on too many tasks. There may be a need for him to pace himself and relax a little more. He is likely to influence others by his force of character. This could lead to him being seen as over-demanding.

James can communicate and will normally display confidence in the majority of his dealings. While being quite influential, he generally impresses people in the work situation by his firm, but friendly manner. He usually works within broad parameters and guidelines. He can become rigid, perhaps even a little stubborn in order to win his way.

He is likely to be fairly well disciplined, particularly if a result depends upon it. He is very energetic and restless by nature. Being mobile, this person often prefers work which may involve travel. This individual could get bored with too much repetitive work.

SELF MOTIVATION

James wants authority, position and the freedom to act independently. He seeks earned respect through difficult tasks which provide tangible and measurable goals/targets. James wants to be able to influence others to achieve on his behalf.

JOB EMPHASIS

Directing/Managing

It is essential that the job has clearly defined targets and goals against which progress can be measured. The job should allow for personal recognition, with rewards based upon achievement.

The job should involve motivating and leading people. Although this need not be the prime function. Whilst operating policies should exist, this person should have authority to act without precedent and/or referral.

Motivators

Popularity, freedom of speech and democratic relationships are also important to him.

Should James have a boss, then ideally that person will be a direct but participative leader, who has good people skills, is prepared to communicate well with this individual and at the same time, set fair but very objective tasks, which ideally should be negotiated on a one-to-one basis. James enjoys being challenged by difficult assignments and once a requirement has been agreed he should be given sufficient authority and freedom to achieve the result.

In order to be successful James feels the necessity to stand back from people and suppress his warmth and friendliness. This normally communicative and persuasive individual can act in a more reserved, reflective and serious manner. James may feel that by standing back from people he is able to make decisions devoid of emotion and not let personal feelings stand in the way of his judgment.